

Contents

List of Figures	page vii
Acknowledgements	xiii

Introduction	1
--------------	---

Part I

1	In Search of the 'Authentic' Experience of War, 1914–1917	15
	The Desire to Collect	17
	National Differences in Collecting and Exhibiting	27
	Britain	27
	Canada	49
	Australia	53
	Conclusion	56

Part II

2	Exhibiting for Victory: Travelling War Photography
	Displays, 1917–1920	63
	The False Reality of Photographs	65
	Depictions of the Exotic and Unfamiliar in Wartime
	Photograph Exhibitions	73
	Canadian Exhibitions: Propaganda, 'Reality', and Audience Desires	87
	Exhibiting and Cementing the Historical Record in
	Post-war Australia	96
	Conclusion	102
3	Art Exhibitions: A Higher Truth in Aid
	of Victory and for Posterity	105
	Commissioning and Collecting War Art in Britain	107
	Creating an Artistic Record of Canada at War: The Canadian
	War Memorials Fund	118
	Illustrating the History of Australia's War: Official Australian War Art	127
	Controlling the Message: Censoring War Art	134

Regulating Audience Responses to Official War Art	138
What is the Truth of War? Responses to Britain's Official War Art	140
Conclusion	143
4 Taming the Monsters of War: Exhibiting Weapons and War Trophies, 1917–1920	146
Official Exhibitions of War Technologies and War Trophies during the War	151
Tank Banks and Travelling Tank Demonstrations	151
Exhibiting War Trophies	161
Modern Chivalry: Exhibiting Aeroplanes during the War	186
Official Exhibitions of War Technologies and War Trophies after the Armistice	189
Conclusion	203
 Part III
5 Consolidations: Creating National Museums and Narratives of War, 1920–1935	207
Creating National War Museums	208
The War Museum as National Museum: The Australian War Museum in Melbourne and Sydney, 1922–1935	212
The Imperial War Museum: Displaying the Empire's War Effort	237
Canada: The Dormant Museum, 1920–1935	256
Conclusion: Bedding Down National Narratives	258
6 Museums, Monuments, and Memory: Exhibiting War as Part of National and Imperial Commemorative Projects Since 1925	261
The Australian War Memorial Museum and War Commemoration in Australia	265
The Imperial War Museum and the Landscape of Remembering in Britain	281
Canada: Memorials and Memory	299
Conclusion	310
 Conclusion	 312
Bibliography	319
Index	343