

| | | |
|---|---------------------------------------|------|
| | Illustrations | ix |
| | Acknowledgments | xiii |
| | Introduction | xv |
| 1 | Viewing Kurosawa | 3 |
| 2 | The Dialectics of Style | 32 |
| 3 | Willpower Can Cure All Human Ailments | 67 |
| 4 | Experiments and Adaptations | 114 |
| 5 | Form and the Modern World | 155 |
| 6 | History and the Period Film | 200 |
| 7 | Years of Transition | 250 |
| 8 | The Final Period | 292 |
| 9 | The Legacy | 340 |
| | Notes | 359 |
| | Films Directed by Akira Kurosawa | 397 |
| | Bibliography | 399 |
| | Index | 411 |

| | |
|--|----|
| Frontispiece. Toshirō Mifune as Washizu in Throne of Blood . | |
| 1. Akira Kurosawa. | 4 |
| 2. Kurosawa on location during the filming of Seven Samurai . | 12 |
| 3. The influence of Kurosawa: direct re- makes as in The Magnificent Seven (1960), freely adapted from Seven Samurai . | 19 |
| 4. and 5. The influence of Kurosawa: lessons in wide-screen composition and the stylization of violence. | 20 |
| 6. Kurosawa directs Toshirō Mifune on the set of High and Low . | 29 |
| 7. Kajirō Yamamoto's Horse , on which Kurosawa served as assistant director. | 39 |
| 8. Surrounded by howling winds, Sanshirō (Susumu Fujita) confronts Higaki for their climactic duel. Sanshirō Sugata . | 49 |
| 9. Still a boy at heart, Sanshirō gently tends to Sayo. Sanshirō Sugata . | 53 |
| 10. The individual alone and determined: a young factory worker prays before begin- ning the search for a missing lens. The Most Beautiful . | 54 |
| 11. Serving the needs of wartime, Sanshirō symbolically thrashes the American boxer in Sanshirō Sugata, Part II . | 57 |
| 12. The antics of a timid, bumbling porter (Kenichi Enomoto) undercut the historical drama of Yoshitsune's flight in They Who Tread on the Tiger's Tail . | 59 |
| 13. and 14. Dreams of their own coffee shop cheer an impoverished couple, amid the postwar rubble. One Wonderful Sunday . Disease as a social metaphor: a young doctor (Toshirō Mifune) battles syphilis in postwar Japan. The Quiet Duel | 74 |
| 15. The corrupt lawyer Hiruta (Takashi Shi- mura) and his victim (Toshirō Mifune). Scandal . | 76 |

| | |
|---|-----|
| 16. Yukie (Setsuko Hara) before her transformation, as a privileged professor's daughter. No Regrets for Our Youth . | 79 |
| 17. Matsunaga (Toshirō Mifune) struggles with Sanada (Takashi Shimura), the doctor who wishes to cure his diseased body and spirit in Kurosawa's allegorical Drunken Angel . | 82 |
| 18. Matsunaga falls under the influence of the gang boss, Okada. Drunken Angel . | 87 |
| 19. Competing visual tensions in Stray Dog . While Satō (Takashi Shimura) questions a witness, two geisha set off a sparkler in the corner of the frame. | 90 |
| 20. Murakami (Toshirō Mifune) and Satō hunt for the killer. Stray Dog . | 96 |
| 21. Watanabe's (Takashi Shimura) intensely personal confrontation with death alienates those around him and challenges the social order. Ikiru . | 104 |
| 22. Watanabe tries to reach out to Toyo but discovers that he remains alone. Ikiru . | 108 |
| 23. Kurosawa, "the last of the samurai." | 115 |
| 24. The Kurosawa hero. Kambei (Takashi Shimura) in Seven Samurai . | 119 |
| 25. The bandit (Toshirō Mifune) and the warrior (Masayuki Mori): characters "going astray in the thicket of their hearts." Rashōmon . | 129 |
| 26. Rashōmon 's forest imagery was meant by Kurosawa to embody the dark labyrinth of the human heart. | 131 |
| 27. Toshirō Mifune and Masayuki Mori as the Rogozhin and Myshkin characters in The Idiot . | 140 |
| 28. Washizu (Toshirō Mifune) meets his end in a fusillade of arrows. Throne of Blood . | 145 |
| 29. The painterly style of Throne of Blood . Bleached sky, fog, and desolate plains create a cosmic frame for this tale of human ambition and violence. | 148 |
| 30. Spatial fragmentation and the stress of linear form in The Lower Depths . | 153 |
| 31. Anxieties of the nuclear age: Nakajima (Toshirō Mifune) contemplates the apocalypse in Record of a Living Being . | 161 |
| 32. Nakajima cannot escape the social space of his family. Record of a Living Being . | 169 |
| 33. Compulsions of a tortured Kurosawa hero (Toshirō Mifune). The Bad Sleep Well . | 177 |

34. Disturbances of the modern urban environment. The Bad Sleep Well. 186
35. While the police and his wife look on, Gondō (Toshirō Mifune) prepares the luggage that will carry his fortune to the kidnapper. The multiple areas of composition visualize an impacted social space. High and Low. 191
36. Tokurō (Tatsuya Nakadai) tracks the kidnapper as the police mobilize for the hunt. High and Low. 194
37. Space as social metaphor: a window of glass and wire separating them, Gondō confronts the kidnapper who has tormented him. High and Low. 197
38. Kambei (Takashi Shimura), flanked by Gorobei (Yoshio Inaba) and Katsushirō (Kō Kimura), declares that the farmers and samurai must struggle together as one. Seven Samurai. 211
39. The weight of the dead and the promise of community in Seven Samurai. 213
40. Kikuchiyo (Toshirō Mifune) and Kyūzo (Seiji Miyaguchi) in the final battle, a vortex of rain, steel, mud, and death. Seven Samurai. 219
41. The violence of the sixteenth-century civil wars in a fairy tale context. The Hidden Fortress. 221
42. Sanjurō (Toshirō Mifune) enjoys the carnage from his watchtower perch in Yōjimbō. Director Masahiro Shinoda criticized Kurosawa for this imagery. 224
43. Evil unleashed, as the violence of the gangsters and their merchant backers consumes the town. Yōjimbō. 229
44. Preparing for the showdown, Sanjurō arms himself with a dead man's sword. Yōjimbō. 232
45. Sanjurō vanquishes his foe and alter ego (Tatsuya Nakadai). This scene is a key moment in the visualization of violence in the samurai film: moments before, Sanjurō's sword has cut so deeply that his foe's chest erupts in a geyser of blood. Sanjurō. 234
46. Yasumoto (Yūzō Kayama) learns the secrets of life and death from Niide (Toshirō Mifune), in the supreme master-pupil relationship of Kurosawa's cinema. Red Beard. 237
47. Niide and Yasumoto carry the battered child, Otoyō, to the safety of the clinic. Human suffering increases in a darkening world. Red Beard. 241
48. As Niide and Yasumoto try to save Chōbō, they confront the mystery of death and the limits of medical knowledge. Red Beard. 246

| | |
|--|-----|
| 49. His spirit buoyed by fantasies, Rokuchan drives his imaginary trolley through the slums. Dodeskaden . | 254 |
| 50. The horror of life in an industrial wasteland. Dodeskaden . | 259 |
| 51. The explorer Arseniev and Dersu, the last Kurosawa hero. Dersu Uzala . | 265 |
| 52. Kurosawa on location for Kagemusha . | 272 |
| 53. Kurosawa with American directors Francis Ford Coppola and George Lucas during production of Kagemusha . Lucas and Coppola were instrumental in helping Kurosawa make this film. | 273 |
| 54. Charismatic clan leader or shadow warrior? The self as an epistemological and social problem in Kagemusha . | 280 |
| 55. The vengeance of Kaede (Mieko Harada) precipitates the downfall of the Ichimonji clan in Ran . | 286 |