

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction.....	13
Introduction.....	15
Need and purpose of this research	16
Outline of chapter content.....	17
 Chapter 1. Cognitive models based on contrast	19
Introduction.....	21
Irony: origins and development. From trope to conceptual tool.....	21
Irony as a rhetorical figure.....	24
Narratology and the study of irony.....	26
Pragmatics and the study of irony.....	29
Main pragmatic approaches to irony	30
Violation-based approach	30
Mention-based approach	32
Pretense-based approach.....	33
Implicit display theory.....	34
Other approaches to irony.....	35
Towards a definition of irony	36
Paradox and oxymoron	42
Paradox	42
Oxymoron	44
Overstatement and understatement.....	48
Overstatement	48
Understatement	53
Euphemism and dysphemism	56
Chapter conclusion	60
 Chapter 2. Metaphor within cognitive linguistics.....	61
Introduction.....	63
Relevance Theory: an overview	63
Cognitive Linguistics: the relationship between language and cognition	66
The cognitive nature of language: the conception of meaning from the experientialist perspective	69
The structure of human thought: idealised cognitive models	71
Propositional ICMs	72
Image-schemas.....	74
Metaphor and metonymy	76

Main cognitive theories of metaphor	81
The many-space model of metaphor and conceptual projection	82
The Combined Input Hypothesis	84
Cognitive operations	89
Johnson's theory of conflation	99
Grady's theory of primary metaphor	99
Narayanan's neural theory of metaphor (NTL)	102
Interaction patterns	102
Integrated interaction metaphor-metonymy	102
Sequenced interaction metaphor-metonymy	111
Chapter conclusion	113
 Chapter 3. Corpus and methodology	115
Introduction	117
The corpus: selection and description	117
Criteria for corpus selection	118
Methodology and steps of the analysis	121
Chapter conclusion	128
 Chapter 4. A cognitive analysis of contrast-based models	129
Introduction	131
Tropes	131
Correlation, resemblance, and contrast	133
Classifying tropes	143
The interpretation of tropes based on contrast	145
Felicitous and infelicitous tropes	149
Distinguishing between irony, paradox and oxymoron, overstatement and understatement, euphemism and dysphemism	152
Irony	159
Introduction	159
Irony revisited	159
Simple and complex irony	160
Simple irony	160
One-correspondence cases of simple irony	162
Many-correspondence cases of simple irony	164
Complex irony	169
One-correspondence cases of complex irony	169
Many correspondences cases of complex irony	173
Verbal and situational irony	175
Verbal irony	175

Situational irony (or situational paradox)	182
Negative and positive irony	186
Irony as a complex model	187
Irony and the generation of implicatures	193
Ironic triggers	198
Conclusion	202
Paradox and oxymoron	203
Introduction	203
Paradox and oxymoron revisited	203
Paradox	203
Oxymoron	207
Complex tropes	211
Paradox, oxymoron and contextual effects	213
Conclusion	214
Overstatement	214
Introduction	214
Overstatement revisited	215
A speaker-based model of overstatement	217
One-correspondence model	218
Many-correspondence model	219
A hearer-based model of overstatement	221
One-correspondence model	221
Many-correspondence model	222
Complex tropes	224
Hyperbolic chains	226
Overstatement as a mechanism of implicature generation	226
Conclusion	228
Understatement	229
Introduction	229
Understatement revisited	229
Meiosis	230
A speaker-based model of meiosis	232
One-correspondence model	232
Many-correspondence model	234
A hearer-based model of meiosis	236
One-correspondence model	236
Many-correspondence model	237
Complex tropes	239
Echoic meiosis	248
Litotes	248
Conclusion	251
Euphemism and dysphemism	252
Introduction	252

Euphemism and dysphemism revisited.....	252
Euphemism	253
A speaker-based model of euphemism	253
A hearer-based model of euphemism	254
Dysphemism	255
A speaker-based model of dysphemism	255
A hearer-based model of dysphemism.....	256
Complex models	257
Conclusion	260
Chapter conclusion	260
 Conclusion	 261
Introduction	263
Conclusions	263
 References	 269